CHRISTINA SMILEY OWNER & FOUNDER OF SIERRA JUDGMENT RECOVERY

Originally operating in South Lake Tahoe, California, and now located in St. Mary's, GA, Ms. Smiley is a founding board member for the California Association of Judgment Professionals and has also served as the Director of Continuing Education. She holds memberships with several national and state professional judgment recovery associations. She has coordinated and presented several continuing education seminars, and has spoken for various industry associations, including the California State Sheriffs' Association.

The education of new judgment recovery specialists and the further development of the judgment recovery industry are her primary interests.

Sierra Judgment Recovery has been actively enforcing civil judgments since 1994 and has been a primary training provider since 1997.

Here is her story...

I started my business in a nationally renowned ski resort area destination with a population of around 25,000. Just try to make a decent living in a place where the usual job prospect would be a ski lift operator!

Fortunately, I now am blessed to live in an upscale neighborhood of hard-working-class individuals who are all extremely curious about what I do that enables me to stay home all day. Not bad for an average person that was in debt up to her eyeballs just a few short years ago!

And, for the record... I am a real person.

My judgment recovery business consists of myself and three additional employees. I have arrived here after traveling down a long, toilsome road peppered with many disappointments and failures. I'd like to share my "adventure" with you so you'll know just how far I've come.

Did You Know?

- Did you know that the popular Person Search can locate your subject in several ways: by entering a social security number, entering a last known address, or by entering a phone number. Searching on address has also helped our clients locate vehicles not registered to their subject.
- The date column is important! Be sure to pay attention to addresses that do not have dates next to them as they might have just entered the system and should not automatically be discounted.
- IRBsearch offers free training. Our capable staff can customize a training session for 1 to 100 persons. Contact our office to schedule your free session today!
- Reports can be generated in several different formats. Simply select your preferred format under My Account. Having a report generated in a format you are more familiar with will simplify editing the data and customizing reports for your client.

For more information about these and other features, call us toll-free at 1-800-447-2112, or email customerservice@irbsearch.com.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY FIGHTS TO OVERTURN COURT POLICY

-New Victorville, CA court policy costly for defendants

Under a new Victorville court policy, defendants who bailed out after being arrested are not only being arrested again, but have to post bail for a second time.

Defense Attorney Rick Ewaniszyk has filed a writ of mandate requesting an appellate court overturn the policy on the grounds that it violates due process.

If someone is arrested and bails out, they are given a date to appear in court. When they show up in court, if charges have not yet been filed by the District Attorney's office, their bail is automatically exonerated, without a hearing or any chance for the defendant to speak on the matter.

In fact, Ewaniszyk said, defendants in this situation aren't even on a court calendar and usually wind up aimlessly wandering the court halls trying to find out what the status of their case is. In the month of June alone, more than $2.5 million in bonds were exonerated by the court for 90 defendants who had not yet been formally charged by prosecutors. When charges are filed, a new arrest warrant is issued, the defendant is re-arrested and has to put up cash for a second time to bail out, if they can afford it.

"I think it's accepted wisdom among the public that once they post bail, they will be out of custody until court proceedings are resolved.

Unfortunately, with the practice of the court now, for a lot of people, that's an illusion," said Mark Shoup, Victorville's supervising deputy public defender, who added that he is speaking for himself and not on behalf of his office. "It's illegal and, fundamentally beyond that, it's unfair."

INVESTIGATIONS: MERGE AHEAD

-In the enterprise setting, there's no such thing as a digital investigation. Or a physical one. Searching for clues and resolutions requires a blend of disciplines governed by a flexible forensic mind-set.

Not long ago, the legal department at a financial services company in New York got a phone call from a hospital in London. The query: Why are you hacking us? With two known IP addresses, it wasn't difficult for the financial firm's information security staff to go back through the logs looking for traffic between the two organizations. And with the traffic identified, locating the computer from which the hacks were taking place didn't take long, either. The culprit: an individual who—as their human resources records soon confirmed—had formerly worked at that very hospital.

Ah, the good old days. As investigations go, says Winn Schwartau, founder of security awareness certification company SCIPP International and an information security expert who has testified before Congress, the hospital hack was an increasingly rare example of a fast-dying breed: a pure infosec forensic investigation, carried out digitally....

Blended Investigations: Together Is Better

"No matter how good the forensic investigation is at the IT level, there's always going to be a physical investigation—targeted interviews, building-access logs and so on," says Robert Huff, a former FBI agent and now managing director and global leader for corporate investigative services at Aon Consulting, headquartered in Chicago. "Almost always, computer forensics need to be supplemented by physical inquiries."

ADVANCED PERSON SEARCH:

Sometimes it is necessary to search on a deeper level to find your subjects. We have made that search easier with the Advanced Person Search. Our proprietary database combines data from hundreds of sources to create the most comprehensive collection of information about people in the United States. Advanced Person Search's searching capabilities allow you to combine information you have to make searching for your subject faster and easier, saving you time and money.

With this search you can more easily find a subject that has a common name. For example, if you are searching for a John Smith in Atlanta, this search offers multiple fields, allowing you to enter another city or state that the individual has lived in as well as relatives' names. This is just one way our customers take advantage of this valuable search option.

TIP: You can search for an individual on just their last name and the last four of their social security number.

The screenshot shows a search interface with the following fields and values:

- Last Name: MARSUPIAL
- First Name: [Empty]
- Middle Name: [Empty]
- SSN: 6789
- Street Address: [Empty]
- City: [Empty]
- State: [Empty]
- Zip: [Empty]
- Phone: [Empty]
- DOB: [Empty]
- Age Range: [Empty]

Buttons for 'Search' and 'Clear' are visible on the right side of the form. There are also 'Coverage' and 'Help' links in the top right corner.
